Map system: Players go through levels in a platformer style. The main mechanic in this game is slide around the map. There are levels with grids and levels without grids. Each level has blocks to jump on, some of the blocks will not drop if you touch them, some will, some will shoot you if you get on them or push you into the air. You can also wall jump and double jump. You have two type of camera, first camera is a top down view, which allows you to see the whole map and the second camera is a side view which allows you to see tiles on the sides of the map. Note: The camera will lock when you go too far in that direction. All platforms are uniquely colored. Each tile on the map is a different color and there are 8 different tiles which you can slide from one end of the map to the other. There are two different types of gems you collect throughout the game, smaller and larger gems. Which one you get depends on the size of the maze. The size of the maze will vary from very easy to very hard. As you go through the levels, your goal is to collect all the smaller gems and get to the exit portal to exit the maze. During the levels, there is more than one player and you can share the same portal to exit, which the map is simple to solve, but as you go from level to level, the gameplay gets harder because of multiple players and enemies. Buttons Controls: These are the in game controls you can use to complete the puzzles. WASD - Move the mouse cursor, left and right arrow keys - change the view. Up and Down Arrow keys - Zoom in and out. Spacebar - Jump. + to press, - to release. Left stick - Adjust zoom. Right stick - Arrow keys. Mouse button 1 to jump. Mouse button 2 to wall jump. Note: This game does not use a mouse, but uses the in game controls. Mouse left clicking to jump, double clicking to wall jump.

Gem Mechanics: There are a lot of gameplay mechanics that use gems as a way to level up. Once you collect each gem, it will be different from the previous gem you got. Sometimes you will get bigger and sometimes you will get smaller, each is helpful in a different way. The size of the gems will vary from one level to another. Some gems will be pushed to you by the enemies in the level. If you have a gem that was pushed into you, you

What's new in NaGongGan Infinite:

Sluggish Morss: Days of the Purple Sun is a science fiction-fantasy novel by American writer Jack Vance, who is commonly credited as the originator of the Dying Earth subgenre. This is the second book in his Dying Earth series after The Eyes in the Sky. It was originally serialized in Astounding Science Fiction magazine and was later published as a trade paperback. Set in the City of Z (also called the City of Death) on the Oerth, an earth-like planet orbiting Tau Ceti—the nearest star to our own (and the nearest habitable starsystem)—the novel alternates between the fictional concepts of Pglath, inhabited by the intelligent furry Facech—and Eistavan, an ancient subterranean hell undergoing a massive resurgence. The facechs are now forced to blend with the changed surface world. Development history of the book ranged from the first public reading in August 1946 until the late 1980s, from its active publication—and writing until near the time of Vance's death—to the official publication on 7 December 2014. However, Vance stopped working on it following the 1957 Chandler edit, after Vance had agreed to work to finalize the copyrighted Chandler. The character of Sluggish Morss, the titular protagonist of the first section, is the renamed form of the character Joó Dar. The Joó Dar character, the sexually and socially repressed man hidden from public view, and so the setting for all the action, was specifically created for early versions of the novel, and does not appear in later versions. Plot In the light of day, the City of Z, the capital of the Oerth, is a wilderness inhabited by "menfolk" on two groups of the largest and most populous human colony, Alorn and Facech: the menfolk, who are being visited by a newly isolated denizens of another local planet, Eistavan. Sluggish Morss is a young man living in the frontier region of the city of Grzamar. He travels to the City of Z to fetch his sister Lowlis, who has been sent there by her mother. The bulk of the narrative is in the form of Lowlis's journey into Eistavan where she reunites with her mother, and her attempts to return to Grzamar. At the beginning of her search, Lowlis encounters the Sregon Sisters—three elderly, rich, and powerful Facech women,
